

TEXTPRAXIS. DIGITAL JOURNAL FOR PHILOLOGY invites submissions of both academic articles and special issue proposals relating to literary and cultural studies topics on a rolling basis.

The journal is broadly structured around three thematic pillars:

1. Literature and Society (e.g. cultural turn and literary studies; sociological approaches to literature)
2. Theories of Literary Study (e.g. discussion and reflection of approaches to literary theory)
3. Literary Studies and Praxis (e.g. literature in the museum, performances, theater practice, literature in the context of the commercial literary industry, publishing, etc. These contributions can also take the form of essays, interviews or journalistic texts.)

Abstracts (ca. 500 words) for articles as well as special issue proposals (brief abstract + tentative list of contributions) can be submitted to textpraxis@uni-muenster.de on a rolling basis.

TEXTPRAXIS is one of the leading cultural studies Open Access journals in Germany and is listed in the Directory of Open Access Journals (DOAJ). Accordingly, the publication process is free of any fees and all articles are freely accessible for immediate appearance under a CC-BY 4.0 license. Permanent traceability of publication is guaranteed by the document server of the Universitäts- und Landesbibliothek Münster. TEXTPRAXIS publishes both English- and German-language contributions. For further inquiries, please e-mail us at textpraxis@uni-muenster.de or use the contact form on our website www.textpraxis.net.

Editorial Team: Nursan Celik, Yagmar Su Kolsal, Rita Maricocchi, Dominik Mika and Laura M. Reiling

Textpraxis. Digitales Journal für Philologie
Universität Münster
Graduate School 'Practices of Literature'
Germanistisches Institut
Schlossplatz 34
D-48143 Münster
www.textpraxis.net